NGM page 197 Exercise 15c Questions 8 – 10. Read the text below and answer the question on it.

The rise of social media has transformed communication across the globe, with over 4 billion users actively engaging on platforms daily—a fact that cannot be ignored. Yet, despite this undeniable growth, it is clear that these platforms are doing more harm than good. Social media is addictive, manipulative, and deeply distracting, pulling people away from meaningful, real-world connections. Stop scrolling endlessly, reconsider your habits and take control of your time before it is too late.

Many supporters argue that social media fosters connection, but this view is overly optimistic and ignores the darker reality. In truth, these platforms often amplify negativity, spread misinformation and exploit users' emotions for profit. It is disturbing, even alarming, how easily people fall victim to carefully designed algorithms that prioritise outrage over truth. The truth is simple: while social media companies claim to care about users, their primary goal is profit, not well-being.

Consider the evidence: studies have linked excessive social media use to increased anxiety and reduced attention spans. This is not merely a possibility; it is a growing crisis affecting millions worldwide. We must act now, demand accountability and protect future generations from this digital trap.
